EDUCATORS OUTLINE PLAN TO RAISE THE TEACHING STANDARD

Requirements Including Discriminate Certification of Instructors Favored at Meeting of State Board

DR. SNEDDEN TALKS

Chairman Advises Specialization in Single Subject by Pedagogue and Post Graduate Work by the Student!

Dr. David Snedden, state commissioner of education, led the discussion today at the conference of the representatives of colleges and the board of education in the Ford building, to define the conditions for certification of teachers in the state-aided high schools. According to an act passed by the last Legislature no person will be eligible to teach in a state-aided high school after July 1, from the state board of education.

Dr. Snedden seeks to bring about the certification of all teachers in high schools in this state and to make teaching a profession, as it is in California, his native state.

Dr. Snedden says he believes more time should be given by the teacher to his preparatory work and should choose one study in which to become most proficient. He also believes that a student should spend one year at least in post graduate work.

PRICE OF SUGAR COULD BE BROUGHT DOWN IF AMERICANS WOULD RAISE MORE SUGAR BEETS

Nowadays, when one is obliged to lay down 8 cents at the FARMER PLOWING OUT HIS BEET CROP grocery for a single pound of granulated sugar, every man, woman, or child who works for a living must be interested in the tremendous possibilities to be found in the cultivation of the sugar beet. There are now only two days left for hard work as Friday will be used for polishing off the rough places and signal drill.

There is no denying the fact that the prospects of turning out a championship eleven at Cambridge this fall are not as bright at this time as they were at a corresponding time last year. This does not by any means mean that Coach Haughton will not be able to bring the team up to championship form by Nov. 25 when hale is played, but rimply that the present time the outlook is not as good as last v

Losses by graduation have made it necessary for the coaches to devote much time to finding out what men are best fitted to train for the vacant places. This has taken considerable time, as there were no candidates on hand, with the exception of Gardiner at tackle, who gave periority over some other candidate for the same place. Instead they threw open the gates for the entire afternoon and announced that they have no present plans for closing open style of attack and the crimson them. The plays were simple variations of the line splits which form the stock rushers of their coming opponents.

The Yale board of football strategy has reached the decision that the best way to prepare for the important games is to learn to play straight football. The defects that proved most glaring in the West Point game, failure to charge fast and a lack of strength on the defense in the rush line, were taken up, and Foster led the scrubs in a half-hour dash.

A feature of the exhibition was a scrub backfield made up of coaches. Paul Veeder, formerly head coach; Henry Wheaton, formerly coach and for two seasons head coach at Annapolis, and Earle Kistler, fullback last season and freshman that upset the varsity line?

Speakers Point Out What the American Medical Association Is Standing Sponsor For in Its Legislation

OWEN BILL DECRIED

NEW YORK-The New York American, in its issue of this morning gives the following concerning the mass meeting Tuesday evening held under the auspices of the National League for Medical

A very large and enthusiastic mass meeting was held last night at Carnegie hall to protest against compulsory medicine in general, and the socalled Owen bill in particular.

The latter was before the late session of Congress. Its object is to create a department of health and give its head a seat in the cabinet. It is expected to be revived at the next meeting of Con-

The meeting yesterday was called by the National League for Medical Freedom, and the two principal speakers were former Congressman Robert Baker, of Brooklyn, and Dr. Lewis Pinkerton Crutcher, who was professor of materia medica in the Hahnemann Medical College of the Kansas City University.

The audience was an especially intelligent one and had a large percentage of women in it. It followed the speakers intently and applauded the many telling points made.

The American Medical Association, that was declared to be the sponsor of Senator Owen's bill, was the specific subject of attack. The proposed act was declared to be an attempt at the worst sort of tyranny and an effort to make the form of the healing art that the American Medical Association represents the "state medicine" of the country.

There was no attack on any special school of medicine, however, but/a vigorous protest against what was termed turning over to one school and particularly to the influence of one association of doctors the care of the health of the nation and making their particular methods of treatment practically compulsory

Paul A. Harsch, secretary of the National League for Medical Freedom, presided. He explained that B. O. Flower, president of the organization, was at hand, but suffered from modesty and gave the duty of presiding to him.

Mr. Harsch introduced Mr. Baker in complimentary terms. The latter spoke with great earnestness and made a strong impression. He said in part:

Tyranny was ever a coward and a liar. All through the ages she has defrauded and lied. She has always hid her real purpose behind the mask of guise of the American Medical Association is no exception to the rule.

pudding. The old-time housekeeper was very careful in cooking her cranberries. Iron and tin were not permitted to come in contact with them. The cooking was short; if long, the skins grew tough and the seeds bitter. To jelly the cran-berries a syrup was made of twice as much sugar as water and nearly a pound of sugar was used for every quart of berries. They were covered until they began to boil; then the cover was removed and with a spoon the fruit was pressed under the syrup; as soon as every berry burst they were turned into earthen molds and chilled.

But pies were not enough, there had to be pudding also. Sometimes it was the baked Indian pudding, made according to this recipe: Scald a cupful of cornmeal with a little milk, and gradually blend it with two quarts more of milk. Add a cupful of molasses, or more if liked very sweet, and a little salt. Sometimes a little ginger, cinnamon and nutmeg were put in. Two tablespoonfuls of butter will make a tender crust on top. Bake slowly for three or four hours, occasionally stirring in a little cold milk to aid in forming the whey or watery juice.

Another favorite was the "Thanksgiving pudding," where one or two crackers and one egg for each cup of rich milk and one egg for each cup of rich milk able to turn the mattress without stra were the usual proportions. The crackers ing the ticking, says the New Orlean were broken slightly and soaked in milk all night until they remained diffused through it instead of forming a crust on top. In the morning the eggs were idded, a little nutmeg, and plenty of raisins which had been stewed in water until plump and tender, all the sweetness preserved by the evaporation of the water. Often two puddings were made, one with sugar, and one unsweetened to be served with a sauce another day. This also had to bake gently for a long time, but not so long as the Indian pudding. These puddings were served. It is difficult for the modern purs with sweetened cream.

American Literature Profited by the Earnest Pilgrim's Discourse on Self-Love Which Was Printed in London in 1622

OBERT CUSHMAN first appears in the history of the Pilgrims in 1617, when, in company with John Carver, he was sent to London by the Leyden congregation to negotiate means for the removal to America. From this errand the agents returned without having accomplished their object, but the next year Cushman and Brewster were sent, and they were successful in obtaining the contract under which the Pilgrims ventured to make their departure.

When the allotment of passengers to the two ships was being made, and it was seen that all the leaders should not go in the Mayflower (which was more commodious and desirable than the Speedwell), lest there might appear to to be some favoritism, Cushman with his household embarked on the Speedwell. But for this denial of self-interest he would have sailed in the Governor's the venerable Brewster as ruling elder ship and have been a signer of the com- in the Pilgrim church.

It was Christmas eve. In a lowly woodcutter's cottage Mummy Tyl had shall be, when better reason cometh, put little Tyltyl and his sister Mytyl to bed, and Daddy Tyl looked in to make sure they were snugly tucked under the comforter and sound asleep. Yes they were asleep and having a wonderful

They dreamed that a strange light streamed through the window. The light got in Tyltyl's eyes and he tumbled out of bed and ran to the window. There he could see the rich children in the house across the street very happy around their Christmas-tree, and making merry with their presents. By this time little Mytyl was looking, too, and longing for tarts.

Just then an old woman walked into the room. She told the children that they were to start at once on quest for the blue bird, which she needed to make her little daughter well and happy. The old woman gave Tyltyl a cap with a magic diamond on it to wear on his journey. To show what a wonderful cap it was she told Tyltyl to turn the diamond. Hardly had be begun to turn it the least mite before the dull walls of the cottage suddenly began to glow as if made of millions of precious stones.

The old woman turned into a fairy princess surrounded by the dancing hours, all pretty ladies, who had issued bread tumbled out of the pan and joined in the dance, and Bread himself rolled gruntingly out from under the table. Fire came seething from the hearth. trots in barking out his joy at being able at last to tell his little god Tyltyl how deeply he loves him.

Then Tyltyl and Mytyl started on their journey with all these queer creatures for company. They all went out of the window and the next minuet they were in the fairy Berylune's palace There the children were taken in charge by Light, who was to be their guide on their quest of the blue bird.

Speaks for Women

In the evening Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham spoke at rallies in Woburn and Arlington. At both places he reiterated the promise made at Beverly earlier in the day that if elected Governor he would sign a bill to prohibit the employment of women in core-rooms and foundries.

Mr. Frothingham quoted from a speech of Congressman Claude Kitchin of North Carolina in which Mr. Kitchin asserted that the purpose of the South was to make the New England cotton manufacturers transfer their mills there or else go out of business.

Massachusetts, Mr. Frothingham said, could help Mr. Kitchin and his friends along by reelecting Governor Foss.

The Woburn rally was held in Music hall, which was well filled. Former Mayor William E. Blodgett presided.

Speaker Walker urged his hearers to vote for Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, not only for his own sake, but be cause he will uphold the dignity of the state and never debase it for political purposes; and beyond all because he stands pledged to uphold the hands and sustain the policy of "our great, sincere Republican President, William H. Taft."

Former Congressman Scott of Kansas analyzed at length the tariff question and made a strong plea for the retention of the principle of protection. The approaching election, he said, was not one of persons, but of principles, and that a for the people without at the same time ever, doomed to failure, for the time has Democratic victory would mean the aban- lowering their income to the same or a not yet arrived when the country as a donment of the principle of protection greater degree.' throughout the country in the immediate

An Alco Branch for Boston

T is just as true of automobiles as anything else-he who builds a better automobile soon finds a beaten path to his door.

Motor Cars

One hundred per cent. greater than a year ago marks the demand for the Alco Motor Car.

Five hundred per cent. greater than a year ago marks the demand for the Alco Motor Truck.

Motoring Boston and Business Boston are writing their appreciation of the Alco in terms

This constantly growing business now requires a direct connection in Boston.

Therefore an Alco Branch House has been established.

Up to this time the Alco has been distributed here by the Park Square Auto Station.

From now on purchasers of the Alco product-whether a motor car, a motor truck, or a taxicab—will deal directly with the manufacturer—the American Locomotive Company.

There are two distinct advantages which the purchaser gains through this arrangement.

He buys from the manufacturer, who naturally is more responsible than the middleman.

He receives personal service.

There is nothing safer in the world to buy than responsibility or reputation. It is a business axiom.

The responsibility of the American Locomotive Company requires no analysis. Capital $50,000,000, and dating back to 1835 as movers of the world's goods. Builders of over 50,000 locomotives. A reputation indelible.

Taxicabs

Business men will doubtless find it a business pleasure to deal with business men in the automobile business. They can find this opportunity at the Alco Branch.

The new Alco Salesrooms are at 567 Boylston Street. The Alco Service Building is the former Shoe and Leather Exhibition Building, Charles River Basin, Cambridge. And the Alco Factory-only an hour's journey away-is at Providence.

The equipment for Alco Service is complete. A full supply of spare parts, shops for repairs and painting and a sincere desire to take care of Alco patrons go to make up this equipment.

The man in charge is Mr. George H. Hudson, formerly President of the Hudson Colby Company. He is a Boston man, and well known in the automobile trade.

You are invited to come in and look over the Alco line-the Motor Car, which twice won the race for the Vanderbilt cup; the Motor Truck, which holds the world's non-stop record of 168 hours; the Taxicab around which has been built the greatest number of successes in the taxicab business.

He have decided to renew our contract with you for 156 insertions, as we find that our advertising in the "Monitor" for the past year has brought us excellent results.

It is often difficult to trace results to one particular medium, but in this case we are able to do so for the following reasons:

We have seen a decided increase during the past twelve months over and above our normal percentage of increase in the territory within fifty miles of Boston where we have added nothing new to our regular advertising list except the "Monitor". Corroborating this evidence, several of our good friends in the grocery trade have told us that their customers have ordered Burnett's vanilla on the strength of the advertisements seen in your paper.

There are strangely few churches of any size or architectural interest, but ometimes one may come across a bit of Saxon work, such as a window cut from a solid block of stone, still showing the holes into which the wattles were fixed for the clay and wicker walls.

Houses of Three Kinds

The houses are of three sorts, the manor house or small country mansion, the large farmhouse and the cottage. Perhaps the most interesting are the may be met with all over the country farmhouses, for they are usually sur- without much variation. The tradition rounded by barns and out-houses full of seems to have lapsed at this period in stone has latterly led to the cutting up possible to wear out. SAVE $1,100,000,000, URGES EXPERT. BY Roads Association was held here reof road construction throughout this CINCINNATI-Smoke that escapes section. from factory chimneys and engine stacks PROF. COOK ELECTED PRESIDENT throughout the country is worth approximately $1,100,000,000 a year, says 4 Prof. Joe Cook, superintendent of the Matthew Nelson, chief smoke inspector Columbus city schools, was elected reof Cincinnati, who has just compiled cently by the board of trustees of the facts and figures showing the loss to Mississippi Normal College to succeed the public through this fuel waste.

William H. Smith, who tendered his the public through this fuel waste. resignation several days ago.

In a recent report the smoke committee of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce estimated that the direct financial loss to the citizens of that city was at least $12 per capita and "possibly twice that amount." Mr. Nelson figures that there are 80,000 families of five its next annual convention in Washingpeople each in Cincinnati and that the ton. The convention will meet in the cost of the smoke waste to each of these capital next October. families is $100 a year, or a total of $8,000,000. As the tax list last year was approximately $5,000,000, Mr. Nelson thus sees that by eliminating the smoke Rice Growers Association, with head-$3,000,000 in addition. "I maintain that ate in Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi and every county made a gain. the cost to our city is even greater than the $8,000,000 estimate, and I offer the eral are located in each of the states a loss reported in one or more counties.

continues Mr. Nelson. "First-Smoke itself represents a big waste of money which can hardly be correctly given when we consider the emanations- which come from locomotives. steamboats, factories, dwellings and other sources, not to mention the waste of 'heat units' which can be seen in 'waves' coming from the tops of many stacks. These belong beneath the boiler, but from one cause or other they escape up the stacks, and the loss to the merchant is enormous. "Second-I have made a careful and, I believe, a somewhat moderate estimate past week a deed of conveyance from the of the effects produced by the smoke Century Cotton Mills of South Boston to nuisance. I mean the losses caused by the Century Cotton Mills, Inc., of the it in towns of this country which con- same place, was recorded at Houston, the tains more than 30,000 inhabitants. The grantor conveying its entire holdings, annual losses to cities of the above class both real and personal for the considera and population are calculated to be al- tion of $84,000. most $550,000,000.

"The money loss in towns containing less than 30,000 inhabitants will easily reach $100,000,000, so that this sum is not any too much to add to during the week of the gulf coast tropthe above sum of $550,000,000. Thus ical fair. we have a grand total of just $650,000. 100 annual loss caused by smoke!

Since writing the above I have read a statement by Tesla, who is quoted as giving out the following in an interview in New York recently: He spoke of harnessing 'the energy of the gases given off by the great steel plants and producing therefrom 25,000,000 or 50,000,000 horsepower with a value of, say, $450,-000,000 a year.' He spoke of these matters as of things already accomplished. DECREASE SHOWN "Adding Dr. Teslaa's estimate of these gas losses to my figures, we have the smount of $1,100,000,000 as the annual 'fuel waste' of the country."

Nearly all of the girls who have enjoyed the pleasures of the camp this senson could come only for week-ends, but how much those week-ends have meant to some of them may be gathered from the statement of an especially appreciative camper: "Some summers it has seemed to me as if I couldn't stand it any longer to run the sewing machine day after day, with never any prospect of anything different, but this summer has been so happy because I've had the camp to think about and the camp to go to, and it's made life seem, oh, so different! Like_all true campers, the Cranberry cottage girls believe in simplicity of dress, for, of course, the fun is spoiled unless you don genuine camp clothes and braid your hair down your back in old-fashioned school girl style. Camp life in immaculate shirtwaist suits and with your hair dressed high, even if you at short no are sensible enough to omit rats and puffs, isn't camp life at all. And so the Cranberry cottagers have been leading the simple life even in dress; and on Sundays, when, contrary to usual camp custom, many of them have made it a practise to go to church, their pretty but unpretentious muslin gowns and simple hats have marked them as girls

NEW AUTOMOBILE SALESROOMS

Messrs. Whitcomb & Co. report they have leased the third building in the new block now being erected by Governor Foss on Beacon street, at the junction of Commonwealth avenue, to the Ford Motor Company for a long term of These three new buildings are to be six stories in height, of handsome design and equipped specially as salesrooms for the automobile business. They will each have a frontage of 33 feet on Beacon street and a depth of 110 feet, and each one will contain approximately 20,000 square feet of floor space. It is expected they will be ready for occupancy about Feb. 1, 1912.

The entire block of buildings thus to be completed will cover 35,000 square feet of land and will consist of five separate buildings, each of which is leased to a concern prominent in the automobile industry.

DORCHESTER IMPROVEMENTS

An important deal has just been consummated in the Wellington Hill district whereby W. R. Landers has taken title to nine vacant lots, containing 33,600 square feet of land, which the buyer will improve at once with modern three-apartment houses. The land fronts on Deering road, and is only assessed on a value of 10 cents a square foot, eing used for agricultural purposes, and is the first sale made by the M. M. Goodale estate in 50 years. VICTORIES ARE WON

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON-The Young Turk movement is distinctly on its trial. It came into being with the full sympathies of Europe, and for a considerable time it succeeded in maintaining those sympathies. Gradually, however, rumors began to be heard of a nature anything but creditable to its policy. These rumors have taken definite form, and it has been declared that if Abdul Hamid chastised the country with whips, the Salonika committee has chastised it with scor-

In these circumstances it is interesting to hear what a Young Turk delegate to the chamber has to say in defense of the party, and a correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor has recently had an interview with such a delegate in the person of Dr. Haladjian, in which the latter has given his explanation of the present situation.

"It is almost impossible for the outside world to judge Turkey fairly at the present moment," declared Dr. Haladjian, on the occasion of a recent visit to London. Dr. Haladjian, who is an Armenian, occupied the position of minister of public works under the last Turkish Parliament.

"In studying Turkish affairs today it that for centuries Turkey was oppressed by the most despotic tyrants and that it is only three years since she has

"The problem confronting Young Turkey at the outset was appalling. Public sentiment had to be aroused from the inertia of centuries. The desire for better social and political conditions had to be created. The entire machinery of government had to be set up, and Young Turkey was without the wisdom of experience to aid her in this work.

Situation Complex

"The situation was rendered all the more complex by the diversity of races and religions, all of which had for ages been accustomed to regard each other as GLASGOW, Scotland-At a large meet. OLDHAM, Eng.-When the executive deadly enemies. On every side there were the obstacles of private interest

Looking Pleasant for Motion Picture

SPEAKING of the possibilities of porods, a writer in the Chicago Inter Ocean

But think of the trouble it will be to have a photograph taken by the new method! If the subject finds it so hard to look pleasant and also natural for a second or two at present, while being caught in one attitude, how hard will he find it to act naturally long enough to make a moving picture film!

In that distant day one will have to rehearse for a family portrait as much as one would to play Hamlet or Macbeth. He will need competent instruction in dramatic expresion. He will have to attend to a thousand details of pose and gesture that he never even heard of

And even after all that is done it is very doubtful whether he "will appear in all his naturalness," as the advocate o hopefully anticipates. In point of fact the chances are that the majority of portraits will look like amateur night at a 10, 20 and 30-cent vaudeville house. Of course this will be much more entertaining to any one who happens to ook over the family album. It must be onfessed that there is a certain sameness about a photograph which begins to pall a bit after one has run across it in an album a dozen or so times. Any little movement of the eyes or cars would be a great relief.

Women as lurors

Discussion of the possibility of women serving as jurors in the McNamara trial at Los Angeles is based on the assumption that the women of California are now eligible for use of the franchise and any other civic duties and rights. Until the returns are officially canvassed and the enactment of the amendment equalizing suffrage rights is officially certified, it is scarcely worth while discussing this further extension of woman's sphere. But that the discussion has originated among men and not among women is pertinent, and it is an interesting sidelight on the workings of the jury system and the difficulty of impaneling twelve men sufficiently neutral or unopinionated that counsel in the McNamara case should be proposing that it may be necessary to call

In the state of Washington recent legislative action has expressly defined the status of woman as a potential juror. She is not forced to serve unless she cares to, but she may; and since the granting of the right, women have served on juries for major as well as minor offenses. On such data as is accessible, it is said that a jury having woman or women is more likely to find against the defendant than a jury of men. The fundamental principle of Anglo-American jurisprudence has been that innocence was assumed until guilt was proved; that of the French code is the reverse. Women, participating in American judicial affairs, might modify the traditional national

It is interesting to find the state of Washington so carefully considering the desires of the new voters. Not only is jury duty optional, but they also have a choice of court cases, once they have consented to serve. In short, an experiment is being dealt with in a pragmatic, tentative manner. The judges, the prosecuting attorneys and the women are feeling their way along toward an ultimate right method.

That much of the world's dispensation of justice has had an overdominating masculine quality none can deny. The woman's assignment of punishment for cases in which woman is involved either as victim or as offender against law often would differ considerably from that of man. Much of the business of a modern urban court has to do with interests of women and children that women of sense, right feeling, lofty ideals might well be called in to give judgment upon. Twentieth century "feminism" is to leave its imprint on courts as well as on schools and homes.

LUMBER TRUST: Knotty case.

The Poet as Citizen

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT still figures in the anthologies of American verse, and doubtless always will, though even now the number of persons conversant with his poems is perceptibly less than it was a decade ago. A combination of love of nature and a habit of moralizing thereon led him to venture into a field like unto that in which Wordsworth walked; but his output never was as great in volume as that of the sage of Rydal

Mount nor as fine in quality. Nevertheless, for a considerable period of the history of the metropolis he unquestionably was its major singer; he had the aspect of a seer quite as unmistakably as Tennyson; and at his career's close in 1878 he undoubtedly was considered the first citizen of New York. On Monday the first adequate representation of him in enduring bronze was unveiled in the park that bears his name; and he will fitly keep guard over the great public library that preserves forever the memories of Tilden, Lenox and Astor.

Bryant did not win his preeminence as a citizen in a great mart of trade by his verse. He won it as a journalist with high ideals for the community, as an editor who dedicated gifts of expression in prose as well as in verse to honest exposition of political and economic questions. It was the spectacle he presented of a prophet and singer descending to fight on the plane of civics that won him his supremacy as a citizen. When the New York of his time put him forth to preside at banquets where foreign guests were welcomed or to speak when the merits of able citizens were to be appraised, it was because they took pride in a man of letters who also was a loyal citizen, as Dante was in his day, Milton in his, and Goethe and Victor Hugo in theirs. New England well knows the type in Whittier and Lowell.

As a citizen and editor Bryant fought Tammany and Tammany has never forgotten it, or failed to block as long as possible the effort of Bryant's admirers to secure a site for his monument. Thus the delay of a generation is in a way a tribute of praise.

THERE is still time in which to save yourself from becoming an ochlocrat, if you don't want to be one.

Municipal Pensions

BOTH the government of the United States and the larger municipalities are facing the problem of civilian pensions. The high cost of governmental administration is due in part to retention on payrolls of workers admitted to be unable to give full value for salaries received, but not to be turned out of place or deprived of income by any administration that values either its reputation for human sympathy or its political life. The national problem has been fairly considered by competent investigators; an adequate report with wise recommendations awaits action by Congress, and in due time must be discussed and voted upon with courage

The city council of Boston now has before it an act passed by the last Legislature authorizing provision for retirement of employees with partial income from the city. The criticism of this act by the finance commission, which is a body set to guard the interests of citizens, is so emphatic and searching that it will be well for the local lawmaking body to delay action until the constructive measure preferred by the finance commission can be studied as an alternative. An act as important as any system Boston may choose must be drafted most carefully, and it should strike directly at the "politics" which now hampers so much of the administration of departments and raises the rate of taxation. Motives of humanity cannot be allowed to obscure certain clearly defined axioms of ordinary business prudence. No discrimination between arms of the service should be tolerated. Tests of incapacity should be made most rigid. Tests of admission to service, hereafter, should be far more thoroughgoing, if provision is to be made for the closing years of an employee's career. Eligibles should be required, once the system is in operation, to contribute to a retiring fund. The German rather than the British system in this respect should be followed. There must be fullest publicity of all records and recommendations that make possible transfer of an employee from active service to the status of pensioner. Every advantage should be taken of the light shed upon the problem by the national government's experience in working out the military pension system. In an effort to remedy an abuse care must be taken not to create others.

To no group of men would a well drafted and suitably guarded law relative to civilian pensions bring greater relief than administrators with ideals of efficiency and economy. At Washington, in Boston, indeed, everywhere, the problem is acute. The social responsibility to the veteran employee admitted, the main problem thereafter is the working out of a system of joint contribution by officials and by the community, and safeguarding the city or nation against fraud.

IN TURNING his face toward home, it does not necessarily follow that Mr. Taft is turning his back toward all the insurgents.

Central

American

Press Unity

WHETHER it is true or not that the five republics of Central America are considering some sort of federation, it is reasonable to assume that with representative newspaper men gathered in Guatemala City for the purpose of planning greater journalistic unity, an important move has been made for closer affiliation among the nations themselves. In Latin America, as in North America, the influence of the press should be in proportion to the good that is made its goal. A passive attitude on the part of the fourth estate at times is more harmful than progressive methods which refuse to keep the light from shining in dark places. In Central America there has at times been wanting sufficient support on the part of the press in all that made for the fullest development. If nothing further comes from the Guatemala gathering than a summing up of individual efforts and a promise to bring more enlightenment to the people much will have been accomplished.

But the representative newspapers of Guatemala, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Salvador and Honduras broadly hint that eventually there will be need for such a cooperation among the several nations that though governmental affairs may still remain of individual concern, yet the interests of each will concern all of the five republics in Central America. It is not affirmed that a federation will be formed under one President, but rather that a tribunal will be established which will serve as some sort of supreme court. In fact, such a court, in a modified form, is already in use in Central America, and the Carnegie peace palace at Cartago, Costa Rica, recently destroyed by fire, but now being rebuilt, is the outward evidence of the unifying idea pervading the entire region.

It need scarcely be said that the Central American press of today is in a position where it can serve the five nations to excellent advantage. It should not only be possible for the newspapers to inspire confidence at home, however, but so to educate the public thought that the Central American reading public will refuse to accept international news which, on its face, fails to carry the stamp of authenticity.

Cooperation between the newspapers of the five Central American republics may mean in time that all papers printed in Spanish, in the western world, shall have some unifying policy that will do for the journalism of the respective countries what the Pan-American Union, at Washington, is trying to accomplish for the governments concerned.

Georgia Has a Golden Harvest

THERE is significance in the harvest news from Georgia. It recalls the counsel so persistently poured into the ears of southern farmers by the wise men of that section during the low-price period that closed the last century. Georgia's harvest news is good news and it is mainly so because the Georgia farmer no longer depends altogether upon the cotton crop. That, generally speaking, the temptation to go largely into cotton, because of the prevailing high price of the staple in recent years, has not been resisted successfully of late is evident from the fact that more cotton is being produced at present than the market can easily absorb. There has been a slump. The southern farmers who have clung most tenaciously to the diversified crop idea have the most to show for their work this year.

However, even in the case of cotton, the Georgia farmer, and especially the southwestern Georgia farmer, is coming through in fine form. A considerable part of the cotton crop was marketed before the decline had well set in. But in this fertile section of a fertile state it is conceded by close observers of the situation that the golden harvest of this year is due principally to the cause we have already indicated. For example, the corn crop was the largest ever planted in that part of the state, although the acreage given to cotton was increased over recent previous years. Then the hay crop has been excellent and hay commands a ready and a good market. Of this there will be two cuttings, the second being in progress now. The spring oat crop was far above the average, while the yield of potatoes, peas, goobers, sugar cane and melons of all kinds has been great. "In spite of the cotton slump," says a telegram from the heart of the Southwest, "every farmer . . . has made money, and all are in an optimistic frame of mind," as it is right that they should be.

Where there can be no control over production beyond that exercised morally through education, it is, of course, impossible to prevent altogether departures from the safe rule laid down by thinking men in the South at a time when cotton was practically the sole reliance of the farmer in that section, with the inevitable cheapening result of overproduction. It will be well for Dixie, however, if this education shall go on. High prices for cotton are tempting, but the southern farmer must understand that increasing the cotton acreage with the view of taking undue advantage of them is bound to result in an overcrop and a slump.

THERE is hardly a community, little or big, that is not proud of its police force. This statement is made with full knowledge of the fact that there is, also, scarcely a community, small or great, that does not take pleasure periodically in severely criticizing its police force. The policemen have become habituated to this, so that when they read flattering news notices and commendatory editorials touching upon their work it is their custom to cut them out, and it may be surmised that these are used for consolation purposes when the wind changes.

Nevertheless, when an American city police force gets out on its annual parade, be it in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, or anywhere, the sidewalks are certain to be thronged and the windows to be filled along the line of march. This was the case in St. Louis the other day, and it is a pleasure to read an editorial criticism of the event that seems to have been written by one who was able to rise out of the emotion of the moment and to deal with the procession with composure. "Not in an inflated local pride, or in a mere desire to compliment men who get few compliments," says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "but out of some opportunities for comparison and observation, we declare the annual police parade of yesterday a brilliant attainment."

This is certainly starting out well, and one at this distance might hope that it would be kept up, but the writer had no intention, evidently, of concealing the truth as he saw it. Prompted by the instincts of a true critic, the writer explains at once that this year's parade was a brilliant attainment only in the sense that it was very much better than last year's. He leaves the inference that this is not saying much for it, but his aim is apparently to be fair. He does not care to convey to the force the thought that it marches like the King's own or the Potsdam guards. To go that far would be simply to give the force an exaggerated notion of itself. What is necessary is to make the force work this year so that it may do better next year. Thus, we are told, the men kept step only passably well, while some blue legs were seen swinging in the air. Moreover, there was too much wabbling altogether, and the hope is expressed that next time they will not wabble quite so much. There is room for improvement in the drill, whether the cheering multitude realized it or not, and some of the mounted men might easily have displayed better horsemanship.

Now, while this seemingly lacks enthusiasm, it may really point to a better state of things. Possibly when the same newspaper comes around to the period in which the police force is handled without gloves, it may exhibit some of the same moderation and remark, casually or with feeling, that while it is not all that could be expected, it might easily be worse.

THE argument that the abolition of the express companies would make matters quite inconvenient for a certain class in prohibition districts will not go far toward overcoming the parcels post sentiment.

THE average citizen of Los Angeles little thought when the McNamara case was started that he would be dragged into it. But nobody ever knows what is likely to happen under the jury system.

IN THE extreme southern portion of Indiana, three counties east of the Wabash river and the Illinois line, and two counties north of Kentucky, is the county of Dubois. In the extreme southeastern part of this county is the township of Ferdinand. Should you travel thither as a result of your reading of the news that comes from this spot, and with the worthy purpose of inhaling its atmosphere, you will take the Southern railway and ask the conductor to kindly put you, off at Ferdinand Station.

Ferdinand, Indiana, an Ideal Township

Ferdinand Station is the metropolis of Ferdinand township. The town is said to contain about 1000 inhabitants. It has good business houses, nice homes, well-cared-for streets, a telephone exchange, electric lights, excellent schools, churches, banks-it has, in short, everything the modern small town ought to have, except a justice of the peace. In fact, there is no justice of the peace in the township. According to one who has just visited Ferdinand, and who declares that his information came from a long-time inhabitant, the community not only has no justice of the peace at present but has not had one, and has not needed one, for years. In the history of Ferdinand there is no record, according to the informant referred to, of a man having been arrested for a crime, and no record of a civil suit, and the person who spreads these tidings adds: "It is the most peaceful town I was ever in, but for a small place it keeps rank with the rest of the towns in the Hoosier state for activity. Something is going on all the time, but never any rowdyism."

One of the greatest teachers of this age has laid it down as an axiom that the impossible never happens. Ferdinand may be an exception to common experience, but it does not follow that it should be, or that it always shall be. This little Indiana town has brought into existence no new fact; it is simply shedding new light on an old one, namely, that morality and peace are natural and attainable conditions in communal as in individual experience. The average human being can more readily picture a town where disorder reigns and where the people are seldom in agreement, because custom has habituated him to taking the wrong rather than the right angle in his points of view. As a matter of fact, it is much simpler and easier for Ferdinand to be tranquil than to be disturbed, and what Ferdinand has, apparently, succeeded in doing can be done as well by smaller and larger places. Courts are not needed where law is respected and the Golden Rule is observed.

According to John Hays Hammond the time has passed when literary persons can properly represent this government at foreign capitals. He means, of course, persons who are merely literary. But the answer to this is that there never has been a time when persons of this character could properly so represent the government. All the literary men who have distinguished American diplomacy have been possessed of other qualifications as well.

THE government of Cape Colony still uses camels for mail purposes in remote parts of the country, especially where the distances are areat. In the absence of fast trains, an animal that has a hump on it does very well.
